

Addressing Mental Health in Youth with Autism: Working with the Individual, the Family, and the Community

A free public lecture by UBC SUMMER SCHOLAR
Jonathan Weiss, Ph.D.

Associate Professor and Chair in Autism Spectrum Disorders
Treatment and Care Research, York University

July 12, 2017, 5:00-6:30

Pacific Autism Family Centre

3720 Cessna Drive, Richmond, BC

No registration required

Parking is free; light refreshments available

Dr. Weiss's presentation will be videotaped and posted at a later date at <http://circa.educ.ubc.ca/>

Individuals with autism often struggle with managing anxiety, anger, or depression. Increasingly, interventions are being used to help address these difficulties. These treatments are best provided within a context of supporting families and healthy environments. This lecture will review the evidence for individual, family, and community interventions. The presentation is suited for parents, professionals, people with autism, and students.